
How to Record Video with Cyberlink Youcam If you want to record video using your webcam, there are many programs available. But if you use CyberLink's YouCam, the process is much simpler than anything else out there. Here's how:

Step 1: Download and install the program on your computer. It'll easily install by clicking "run" on the installation window that pops up after downloading it. Step 2: Open up the program by double-clicking it once installed. The window will open up with a search bar in the top left corner. Type "webcam" into that search bar and click GO at the bottom of that bar (or press Enter). Step 3: The window will now pop up with a search bar. Type "webcam" into that search bar and click GO at the bottom of that bar (or press Enter). You'll now see a list of all your webcams. Choose the one you want to use. Step 4: Once you've chosen the webcam, click the "recording" icon on the right side of the screen. This will automatically give you a black background, but your webcam should still be seen on the screen – allowing you to move around and exactly what it is that you're recording. Now that you have a recording window, close out of it by clicking on "x" in front of it. Step 5: Launch the program again (launch it without clicking "x") and click on your webcam on the list of webcams. You will now see the video you're recording, which is exactly what you wanted. Step 6: After you're done recording, click on "stop" once more to stop it (you don't have to click "x" this time). Then go back into YouCam's main window by clicking on "subscribe" in front of it. This will allow you to record new videos with your webcam simply by opening up this program again. Step 7: The next time you open up YouCam, you'll now have a new button in front of it, and it will say "Subscribe". Clicking on this button will bring up a window that allows you to select which webcam you want to use. This is useful if you want to record the same video with the same camera again.
